Updated: 11-21-2012

The national average APR remained at 14.96 percent Wednesday, after dropping below 15 percent the previous week for the first time in more than two months.

One issuer, Bank of America, increased the maximum possible APR on its cash rewards card for baseball fans by 2 percentage points. However, the change didn't affect the national average because CreditCards.com only considers a card's lowest possible rate when calculating average interest rates.

The MLB BankAmericard Cash Rewards card previously advertised an APR range of 12.99 percent to 20.99 percent. The card now features a somewhat wider range of possible APRs, starting at 12.99 percent and topping out at 22.99 percent.

The CreditCards.com credit card rate survey (permalink: <http://www.creditcards.com/rate-report>) is conducted weekly, using offer data from the leading U.S. card issuers' websites. Introductory offer periods and regular interest rates will vary with applicants' credit quality and issuer risk-based pricing policies.
